Although Emperor Hirohito himself supported the move, diet members debated the measure with vigor, seeking to assure themselves that any surrender of authority was only of a temporary nature. As a sop, Premier Suzuki declared that the diet would set up a committee to confer with the cabinet on war measures.

Designed to permit the cabinet to act quickly to relieve damage caused by Allied operations, the government's program coincided with the establishment of independent administrations in all of the home islands in the event of their isolation during forthcoming campaigns.

CROP OUTLOOK: 'Above Average'

Because most of the intended acreage will be planted and early season gains have not been offset by recent bad weather, the U.S. can look forward to another bumper food harvest in 1945, the department of agriculture reported.

Volume of crops is expected to be "well above average" despite one of the coldest Mays on record, with deleterious rains in some sections being matched by local drouths in the southwest and dry weather in the southeast.

With an indicated winter wheat crop of 729,255,000 bushels and a spring wheat harvest of 287,397,000, the total of 1,084,652,000 bushels would represent the largest ever produced, USDA said. Oats and hay production should be above average and rye output good. A record crop of early Irish potatoes was forecast along with another bumper harvest of fruits and vegetables.

Pushed to the limit whenever weather permitted, the corn crop is logs in the event of two-thirds planted, USDA said, with the Pacific conflict.

EUROPE:

Use of Germany's resources, both human and material, for restoration of war damage, came to the fore with an American delegation's flight to Moscow to discuss war reparations with Russia and Britain.

Keynoting the U.S. viewpoint before taking off for the Red capital as the American delegation's head, Oil Operator Edwin W. Pauley of Beverly Hills, Calif., declared that the Allies cannot make the same mistake of World War I, of loaning the Germans money to rebuild their industries so as to produce goods in return for reparations.

Asserting that such a policy only enabled the Germans to reestablish their great industrial machine. Pauley said that this time the Allies must seek to divert their energies to other channels, indicating acceptance of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's proposal for converting the country into primarily an agrarian state.

Since Pauley said that the U. S. does not expect to receive appreciable reimbursement for its war costs, heavy American demands are regarded as a trading point for moderating astronomical claims of the other Allies. France alone has asked for reparations totalling 40 billion dollars.

Chief complaint of both organizations was in the care afforded G.I.s at vet hospitals, with both groups reporting overcrowding, staff shortages, low salaries and red tape in many instances. With care found inadequate in 47 per cent of the centers, standards of vet hospitals only compared with those of state, county and municipal institutions in the localities. With Gen. Omar Bradley taking over as veterans administrator, the Legion and VFW proposed a comprehensive program for correcting present conditions, asking for increased bed capacity in vet hospitals; more authority for hospital directors to procure sufficient help and supplies; more intelligent segregation of patients to promote speedier recovery; swift and unprejudiced handling of complaints, and replacement of army personnel with civilians or establishment of army personnel on a civilian basis.

Plan Just and Speedy Trials for Nazi Bigwigs

Allied Commission to Handle Cases of High Leaders; Local Officials to Prosecute Minor Offenders.

> By BAUKHAGE News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C. The legal profession is about to meet the greatest challenge it has ever faced.

The Moscow declaration, published November 1, 1943, and signed by President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin, declares that "those German officers and men and members of the Nazi party" who are responsible for or who have taken a consenting part in 'atrocities, evidence of which has been received from authoritative quarters in many countries," will be 'tried, judged and punished' according to the laws of those countries. This same declaration also declares in its final paragraph that 'major criminals whose offenses have no particular geographical localization" will be tried and dealt with by "joint decision of the Governments of the Allies."

That is where the United States and the challenge of its legal profession comes in.

The body which will try these "big shots' is an international military tribunal, to be designated by an official title, probably by the time these lines are printed, and it is before this court that a member of the Supreme court of the United States, Associate Justice Robert H. Jackson, chosen as American chief of counsel, will appear as prosecutor. He will act jointly, it is presumed, with the counsels of the United Kingdom and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Legal Body

Without Precedent

Never in history has such a legal body been convened. Never has such a task as the one it has before it been of such potential significance to the social and political well-being of the peoples of the earth-never, at least, since the day of a certain Roman procurator of Judea in Palestine. Pontius Pilate was unable to face his responsibility, and finding "that he could prevail nothing, but rather that a tumult was made, he took water, and washed his hands. . . .'

The United States does not intend to wash its hands of the responsibility before it.

There seems to be a welter of confusion as to just what the function of this "military tribunal" is; as to just what, if any, policy has been established by the "Office of the Chief Counsel for the Prosecution of Axis Criminality," which is the title on the letterhead before me. The permanent address of this office is, at this writing, a little uncertain, but it can be reached care of the Pentagon in Washington. Soon it will establish foreign headquarters.

Despite the confusion, this institution has a definite policy and I shall interpret it informally hereunder: (1) We shall avoid "the law's delay" which so annoyed Hamlet. My reason for this assumption is the fact that Justice Jackson did not settre from the Supreme court. The fall term of the court begins in October. Already he has made one trip to Europe for the purpose of rounding up key witnesses and documents and is now beginning final preparation for the prosecution. His staff has been assembled for several weeks and he has coordinated the other government agencies interested in war crimes (war department, navy department, Office of Strategic Services, and others). Authority for this action is vested in Executive Order 9547 of May 2, 1945, which named Justice Jackson as American prosecutor.

Jackson himself said when he was appointed: "There will be no delay on the part of the United States, and we think undue delay is itself a fail-

(2) There is no confusion as to United States policy with respect to the type of offender to be tried. Many individual cases have already been prepared, though not yet announced. As I mentioned earlier, what the United States is concerned with is the big shots, that is Jackson's jobto try the men whose offenses are broader than those committed in and against members of any single community. To put it broadly, those charged with crimes against human-

This rules out the persons brought back to the scene of their crimes, the trials of spies and saboteurs which are coming up daily, offenses against American nationals or against Germans, or individual acts of persecution against Jews or oth-

In other words, Jackson is after big game and he will not be content to fiddle with minor offenses even if committed by major criminals. His job will be to nail those leaders who are responsible for engineering the whole general criminality of the Nazi-Fascist program. The smaller fry will be taken care of by other legal authorities at the scene of the individual crimes or elsewhere.

Jackson Versed As Prosecutor

Justice Jackson's reputation and his record are a pretty good guarantee that he will not be stumped by any hurdles that international lawyers might try to put in his way. But that does not mean he will "railroad" the accused, He will not let the trials sink below a dignified judicial level. They must be, he says, "trials in fact, not merely trials in name, to ratify a predetermined result." On the other hand, he does not believe that "every step must be taken in accordance with technical common law rules of proof." His record shows that he is a "direct actionist"—he can be expected to pull no punches.

I said this was the greatest challenge the legal profession had ever faced. I said that because upon the manner in which these trials are conducted will depend just how clearly Naziism will be revealed to the people of the world in its true light. These criminals must convict themselves and their philosophies out of their own mouths. They must not be allowed to stand before the world with their testimony and that of their accusers as a background, as martyrs to what Jackson himself calls "farcical judicial trials" which rationalize previously settled opinions. This would destroy the confidence of the people in the whole case for democracy, he believes. Nor must the case against them be presented in such a manner as might give even the skeptical a false suggestion that the enemies of democracy have a vestige of right on their

The small but efficient staff which Justice Jackson has selected is worth looking over.

There is Maj. Gen. William Donovan, colorful World War I hero and successful lawyer, now head of the OSS; Sydney Alderman, a distinguished trial lawyer and general solicitor of the Southern Railway; Francis Shea, assistant attorney general and well versed in complicated litigations; Naval Lts. James Donovan and Gordon Dean. Donovan is general counsel of the OSS. Dean, a former assistant attorney general under Jackson when he was head of the department of justice, is a brilliant and successful lawyer who is being transferred from active duty by the navy for the job.

There are no hand-washing Pontius Pilates among them.

The rise in income payments to individuals in the United States from an annual figure of $66,168,000,000 in the prewar year of 1938 to a record high total of $156,794,000,000 in 1944 was extended during the first quarter of 1945, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. Income payments during the first three months amounted to $39,825,000,000 this year as against $37,726,000,000 last year, an increase of 5.6 per cent. Income from every source showed expansion. Salaries and wages rose from $27,357,000,000 to $28,628,000,000, an increase of 4.6 per cent, while dividends and interest rose from $2,454,000,000 to $2,770,000,000, an increase of 12.9 per cent. Although spending by consumers was at a record high rate during the first quarter, it is evident from preliminary information that consumers' income exceeded spending by an amount sufficient not only to meet taxes but to add to consumers' wartime savings, thus increasing the threat of inflation when peace re-

THOUGHTS ON HORSE RACING

Horse racing is a form of competition between horses to determine what shape the customers are in.

It is a demonstration in durability for all participants except the horses.

It is a type of sport that combines. all the features of a subway jam, a food riot, a Christmas shopping rush and a panic in the madhouse.

A man can get the same sensations in any subway station during. the rush hour for a nickel. And in addition he won't have to listen to any tips that the local can beat the express if the smart money is up.

Racing is proof of the claim that, for a chance to lose $2 swiftly, a man will undergo all known forms of inconvenience and torture, provided they are endured in an aroma. of steamed frankfurters, beer, B.O. and fresh roasted peanuts.

Once horse racing may have been the Sport of Kings. But the proletariat has taken over. If a king gets to his seat today with no ribsbroken you know he had the king's horses running interference for him.

Jones and George Fury had ridden into Payneville. Melody was mistaken for the outlaw, Monte Jarrad. Monte's girl, George grunted an affirmative. "If Cherry, in trying to save Monte and later Melody, got them involved in the it wasn't fer the climate of Calimurder of Luke Packer, the insurance forny_'' cop, Fury had met up with Monte, who "Hesh, now. Expect me to harken shot him. Monte returned to the farm where Meledy had gone and was about to to sech drivel the whole day?" Monte Jarrad moved with the stiff caution his wound imposed, but his step was sure as he pointed himself toward the barn. Cherry came trotting out of the house after him, and overtook him at the gallery step. She caught Monte's arm, and he half turned to look at her for a moment over his shoulder. Cherry tried to speak to him rapidly, urgently, but she stuttered, and lost her words. Monte Jarrad shook off her hands, and came on toward the barn.

Cherry stared after him from the edge of the gallery, baffled, uncertain, and more frightened than Melturn away from him, then looked ody had ever seen her. She hesitated while Monte walked seven raked him with surprise, and a new strides. Then suddenly she called out across the fifty yards which separated barn and house, and her tone

Even with Monte Jarrad standing a moment of dread before he went out in front of him, it seemed strange forward. Lightly he lifted George's to Melody that George should ever ask another man to take his gun. George had no gun. His gun was where it had fallen from his hand as he went down, up there in the hills.

Monte Jarrad stood weaving his head this way and that, trying to see through the cracks in the barn wall a hundred feet away from him. Then he started toward the barn again, moving warily and uncertainly, not sure of what he was up against now. Then Monte Jarrad stopped again, He discovered now George's burned hand, that had said in the jerk, to face a different way. He seemed satisfied now that no gun was in the barn, for he was willing to turn away from it. The distant muffle of hoofs was closer, all of it, but it had split up, and now came from two ways. Some of the approaching horses-it sounded like stretch, very near, much nearer than should have been expected yet.

Almost immediately after that-Monte had hardly reached the galtalking he had a hard time getting lery-four riders broke over the crest of the drop where the excuse for a road plunged downward into the brush. They were strung out a hands curiously, as if he didn't know little, but obviously hanging together. Fever Crick de Longpre was in front on one of his runt mustangs; crossly, "that you're worse off than he was whipping up side and side with his rope-end, like an Indian. and the blown cayuse was running uphill like a scrambling cat. Avery de Longpre was close on his flank; his bigger horse kept trying to pass, but the swinging rope made him flinch back. After these two, Lee Gledhill came pounding up over the hump, standing in his stirrups to sweep the layout with ten times keener a scouting eye than the two ahead of him had used. And last came a rider Melo-

THE STORY THUS FAR: Melody | frightened Melody, "I-I'll think | stranger last and most reluctantly about it. George, was it Monte Fever Crick and Lee Gledhill began talking urgently to Monte, both at once. Their very intensity seemed to press their voices low and breathy; Melody couldn't get any thing they said. He got it, though, when Monte Jarrad snapped at Fever Crick to shut up; and Fever Crick did so, flinching back as if he had been clipped with a quirt. Shortly after that there was a general half-movement toward the horses, and the man Melody did not know promptly mounted again. But Monte Jarrad stood where he was, speaking slowly and bitterly, in a low voice; and when he stopped to spit, contemptuously, the mounted man reluctantly got down from the gray horse. He was a stocky man, very broad in the shoulders, and chunky in the face; as plain as anything in the world, he felt helpless and unsafe afoot, like a horse-Indian.

Lee Gledhill was trying to argue with Monte, hard and quick; Melody knew Lee's face was going sniffsneer. Avery kept swinging this way and that, unhappily trying to watch in all directions. And all this time that unbroken gabble of hoofs kept coming from the downmountain road, stronger and closer as each minute dragged out. It grew in strength endlessly, long after it seemingly could come no nearer without the riders appearing. Its soft unrhythmic thrum could be felt in the ground, sensed in the tremlong, pealing whinny. And still the five men stood and deadlocked over a decision which any moment could blow itself up like a powder keg,

It took care of itself now. The short metallic whang of a bullet, exactly like the breaking of a guitar string, ended in the rattling echo of a rifle's voice. The head of the gray horse jerked up, and it screamed. Then it sagged to its knees slowly, and rolled onto its side with a thump. Only its head did not go down. It lay there looking bewildered, as if resting, Avery de Longpre and Lee Gledhill tied their horses then. They did it in close to nothing and a fifth, and took cover in the house, joining Monte Jarrad who had moved inside, without hurry, in the same moment the bullet struck. Fever Crick first dropped his reins entirely and bolted for the kitchen. Then he was shamed by sight of the others securing their horses, and made a wild spraddle-legged dash at his cayuse, stampeding it past hope. It went crashing down the mountain, its head held high to one side, to keep from tripping on the trailing reins. Fever Crick scrambled for cover, tripped on the edge of the gallery, and sprawled headlong through the kitchen door.

No other long-range shot followed the first one immediately.

Now Cherry de Longpre came out of the house, walking steadily and wearily, as if nothing were happening. Monte Jarrad called after her a sharp command that she stay in. She gave some short answer that Melody could not hear; but as he commanded her again, furiously, she spoke over her shoulder to him, and this time everyone heard what she said.

Her tone was soft, and nearly lifeless except that it shook a little; but the words were clear, "Damn you," she said. "Damn you, and damn you. I'll go where I please; and you'll burn in hell before you stop me.

Melody said, "I'm sorry, Cherry." "For what?" she whimpered, crossly.

She had him, there. "Well-jest in "Nearly forty riders are on the road," she told him, crisply now. "Lesier Cotton's pulled them together. Some of these are good men. and pivoted on one heel in a swift They'll close in to finish this business once and for all, and this time they'll do it. Get on this horse and bust him out of here!" Melody Jones rolled his eyes at George, embarrassed, and did nothing. Cherry turust the reins into his hands.

"Will you come to life," she three or more-were coming in ful! begged him. "If you can show enough sense, just this once in your life, to cut out the back way, and not trip up, or ride in the wrong direction, or some other silly fool mistake - there's still a little chance."

what they were for; then laid them on the edge of a two-by-four, like something meant to keep on a shelf. "Heck," he said. "This here's monotonous."

"She's right," George Fury said from where he lay. "You can't do no more damage here." "Harry Henshaw ain't hardly equal to--'

"Damn Harry Henshaw! Git!" Sweat was standing out on George Fury's forehead, while at the same time his teeth showed signs of chattering. Physical weakness was only part of that. The rest of it was the nervous sense of being trapped helpless here by his wound, while hell-to-pay broke all around him. But as Melody still stood, wordless, George closed his eyes and subsided, washing his hands of further obilgation to the impossible. (TO BE CONTINUED) year to year and it is not always divided the same way. National income is the grand total of what everybody in the nation earns. It in-its that year ran just under ten bil-There is a popular notion that people who work don't get very much of the fruits of their toil. Not long ago repeated a 40-year-old piece of political propaganda to me, believing it every word. He said, "Here in America 2% of the people have 90% of the wealth." There is not much to say about this statement: It is not true. It has never been nearly true.

Official Figures Last year the national-income dol-Iar went like this: 72c to American workers, 6c to corporations, 8c to small businesses in the form of profit, 7c to farmers as return on what they produced, and another 7c to landowners and stockholders in the form of rents and dividends, and to money lenders in the form of interest. Of course all years aren't alike but they vary less than you

National income bobs up and down but people who work always get most of it. Eack in 1939, which was a typical pre-war year, our national income was not half as high as last year's; 70.8 billion dollars to be exact. Then, workers got 68% of it, and 6% was corporation profit; not much change in how the income was divided, but less than half as much actual money for everybody. Ancient History

Back in 1929, the year Hoover succeeded Coolidge as President, national income was 83.3 billion dollars; bigger then, than in 1939. Corporation profits were higher-9% as against 6% in recent years. But wage earners and office help were getting 64% of national income, even then. In 1932 (the depression) when corporations generally earned 9% less than nothing, wages climbed to 97% and still some working people went hungry.

Any fair analysis of national income figures over a period of years leads to this observation: workers, laborers and clerical people, get more money with the slightly small-er percentage of a big national in-come than with the bigger percentage of a small national income. The moral is perfectly clear. We will all fare better working together for a big national income than by wrangling about who gets most of it, and then having a small one.

THE RIGHT TO YIP!

Another right that we Americans want to keep is the right to howl when we don't like what's

In collectivist or totalitarian governments, there's only one side. You agree, or you get shot or sent to a prison camp.

Our American system is far from perfect. But we have two sides, and we can still yip and yap. Let's improve our own system of individual initiative, enterprise, hustle and healthy competition-instead of copy-catting any other country's scheme of too much government bossing-and being told to fall in line and shut

American Prisoners say:

MATCH THEIR SPIRIT in the MIGHTY 7™ WAR LOAN DRIVE

YES, despite their long months and years of privation and suffering, those gallant men, just released from filthy Jap Prison Camps, still have their good old fighting spirit. They're itching to get back into the fight and give the Nips a taste of their own medicine. Let's show them that we're not quitting either! Let's match their spirit with our dollars! Let's make this MIGHTY 7th War Loan the mightiest of them all!

But to come even close to matching their sacrifices, everyone here at home must buy War Bonds until it hurts. Buy double or treble the extra War Bonds you've bought in any previous drive. Remember, this is really two drives in one. In the same period last year, you were asked to subscribe to two War Loans.

So let's go, Americans. Our hard-fighting Soldiers, Sailors and Marines are giving their ALL. The least we can do is to lend our dollars.

Methods Devised for War Are Being Adapted to Save Timber Resources

The swords of war become the plowshares of peace, and this time Mars has some weapons that are going to come in mighty handy in the never ending battle against forest fires. Some very logical questions are being asked today: Why not use fire-extinguishing bombs to drop on forest fires? Why not use bombers, equipped with precision sights, to aim these bombs? Why not use firefighting parachute troops to drop behind "enemy" lines or to transport to fire regions difficult to negotiate by land? The man who is expected to take charge of this program is David Godwin, a veteran of the forest service, who has been active in anti-fire experimental work for a number of Godwin already has investigated the possibility of dive-bombing forest fires, using bombs which in reality were exploding fire extinguishers. That, however, was a number of years ago, and didn't meet with thi much success. It was difficult, the callope experimenters found, to hit the exact ng line spot where the bomb-extinguishers umme would do the most good, and there ics, p was difficulty in covering a sufficiently large area.

Aviation enthusiasts, however, are counting upon effective bomb-sight and other precision instruments to and an change this situation. As an alterore tim native, they believe there may be few q great possibilities in the use of helicopters. No doubt a fleet of bombing planes could be used to advantage in blasting a fire out of a forest, especially with ground support from a paratrooper battalion. The use of parachute-dropped troops to fight forest fires was first, en planes could bring them by the tried a few years ago, and they have been seeing action in this capacity ever since. But there never has been enough of them to combat a really big fire. This number can be expanded greatly after the war, and the wartime training of paratroop f fish combat units can bring about the mora organization of a formidable fire-

trop fighting force. 'Jeep' Will Be Fire Engine.

When it comes to post-war tech e fish niques in forest fire fighting, howng it ever, it may be not only the use of suck waves of bombing planes, and parachute troops to augment the present forces. The ubiquitous "jeep"-accustomed to the jungle trails of New Guinea and the difficult terrain of Africa and Italy-is already recommended by professional foresters as highly suitable for service as a miniature fire engine. Likewise, the "walkie-talkie" radio unquestionably will be used by the thousands to keep in contact between fire chiefs, their crewmen, aviation spotters, pilots and paratroopers overhead. "Half-tracks," which combine automobile speeds with tank and tractor ability to negotiate swamps and rugged land, can serve efficiently as big brother to the jeeps, and for use as buildozers to scrape fire trail barriers to the progress of flames. Bulldozers already are essential firefighting equipment.

Even flame-throwers developed by the chemical warfare service may be called upon for building "back #### combat, it, and plenty of oxygen make it burn freely.

Thus, if the original fire does get out of control of the first paratroopfor the first reinforcements also, it is almost certain that the third wave of paratroopers and ground forces will resort to building backfires and digging trenches as the maximum effort to check it. Bulldozers and plow-equipped half-tracks will mechanize a large part of the digging job. Men with flame-throwers and extinguishers will handle the backfires. Other men with gasoline-powered 'chain-saws'' will clear the path of the bulldozers and half-tracks of Forest operators are seeing to it that our trees continue to grow, but they know that fire is the biggest menace to growth. They need weapons with which to fight fires, and they expect those that this war provides will help to keep a better control over this persistent enemy.

On Land or Sea, Navy P. O. Gets Mail Delivered

System of 5,000 Branches Reaches Remotest Islands

One of the most gigantic wartime tasks confronting postal men is delivering mail to mobile units of the fleet. The mounting tempo of operations in the last year means not only that greater distances must be spanned to effect delivery but that a greater number of men are involved in combat activities increasing all classes of mail to an unprecedented volume.

Some-Throughout the world, there are over 5,000 navy post offices, varying greatly in size and appearancesome within the United States but the vast majority are on board ship or at advanced bases or on captured and liberated islands. The large ones serving the mobile units are designated as fleet post offices.

What Navy Men Want. Extensive surveys show that navy, coast guard and marine corps personnel overseas above all want letters-letters giving local news and telling of things done and things planned. Secondly, they want objects with a personal sentimental appeal such as photographs, snapshots, drawings made by their youngsters, and newspaper clippings that can be enclosed in these letters.

Such surveys also show that they positively know what they don't want. They don't want cakes, soft candies, cookies, cigarettes and fancy toilet kits. These foods do not survive the frip to the Pacific and arrive in a battered, moldy condi-

To make sure your package arrives in good condition, the following suggestions are outlined:

1. Use a strong container (special boxes are designed for this purpose). 2. Pack each article in shredded paper or some filler material to prevent movement inside the package.

3. Inside each package put a sheet of paper with a list of the contents and the full address of the person to whom it is sent plus your return address.

4. Tie the box with cord, then WRAP it in heavy paper and tie it with strong cord.

5. PRINT the address in ink directly on the wrapping; don't use gummer! labels which fall off when they are subjected to moisture.

Experience has shown that a man overseas places a far higher value on a letter from home than a package of candy, or a long delayed newspaper. Because of the great morale factor, the navy delivers first class mail to the far Pacific as ex- extra footage, applause and glory peditiously as possible.

ers to reach it, and proves too big HOLLYWOOD, the town that's made "colossal," "gigantic," and "stupendous" the keynotes of the movies, likes nothing better than giving the fans their money's worth. Where the stage supplies a line of 20 girls in a musical, the movies (bless 'em) give us 200, Such prodigality pays off and always has. That's one reason studios do things in a big way.

Some of the boys recently sat down and figured that the fans who pay to see Fred MacMurray or Bette Davis in a picture would be twice as eager to see their favorites if said favorites were to do two roles in the same film instead of the customary single stint. Two for the price of one is the bait held out these Imagine how the bobby-soxers would queue up if a marquee were to read: Tonight: 2-Frank Sinatras-2"! The dual role (one star playing two parts in the same movie) is back in vogue with a bang. Actors are delighted—and why not?—since this means twice as many closeups. But camera men and technicians are cussin' right out loud, for making a pair of actors sprout where there should be one is a tricky and tedious job. It was bad enough in days of silent movies to match such action, but with dialogue the problem takes on the tone of a Russian trying to translate a speech done

It's an Epidemic

Over at Mutual, Fred MacMurray is playing twin brothers in the comedy "Pardon My Past," on which Leslie Fenton serves as both producer and director. This comedy has Fred playing two distinct characters, one comedy, the other a heavy. When I asked Fred how he liked being a split personality he quipped back at me with: "Don't forget, Hedda, it isn't every man who gets a chance to shake hands with himself. And it isn't every man who gets the chance of being his own rival for the affections of pretty Marguerite Chapman."

Over at Warners', Bette Davis is having herself an emotional daisy day as two girls—one good, t'other bad-in "A Stolen Life." Bette's a triple-threat gal on this. She's also producing it. Bette about emotes herself to pieces when she plays a single role, so you can imagine what this is doing to her.

Cornel Wilde of "A Song to Remember" is also hitting the dual role trail in "A Thousand and One Nights," a technicolor extravaganza of old Bagdad. Al Green, director, had his hands full on this one, for not only does Cornel do a dual stint 16 inches long and 11 inches wide, but Dennis Hoey works in double exposure throughout the story, impersonating an eastern potentate and his wicked twin brother, Hajji. Ray Rennahan, camera man, told me he went berserk trying to keep the characters straight on the film.

In "Scared Stiff," which comes from Pine-Thomas, Lucien Littlefield also plays two parts, eccentric twin brothers, who get mixed up in the theft of a jewel-studded chess set, of all things! Danny Kaye in "Wonder Man" plays identical

The Hard Way

On the stage a few plays have had a star play two separate and distinct parts in the same show. This causes the actor or actress to make quick costume changes just off the stage and switch wigs as quickly as possible. But it really takes a movie camera to present anything as boisterous and blatant as Betty Hutton singing a duet with herself in "Here Come the Waves" or Gene Kelly's startling after ego routine in which he serves as his own dancing pariner in "Cover Girl." The dual role, however, is as old as the moving picture itself. 'Way back in the days of short-reclers technicians discovered how to make half a film, take a scene, then wind back and expose the other half which had remained unexposed. Crude double exposure was thus obtained, but it was a far cry from such smooth achievements as having Fred MacMurray hand himself a letter in "Pardon My Past" or Cornel Wilde's duel with himself in "A Thousand and One Nights."

The stars enjoy the glory of a showy dual assignment. No, they don't get twice their salary, but the make up for the lack of bulge in their bank accounts.

A Great Opportunity

We'll see if our big boys in the studios can take it. They're getting overseas shots like mad. Two top men from each studio have been invited by the government to go over. Idea is for them to be shown the horrors of Naziism, Fascism, concentration camps, torture chambers, so that from now on they can keep this in mind when planning pictures. Hordes of slaves from many countries must be reeducated. Pictures will teach them the meaning of free

Since 1892, in Paddington Station, London, a mongrel dog named Tim has collected nearly $10,000 for the widows' and orphans' fund of a British railroad, says Collier's. For 11 years, Tim met all trains and begged for coins to be dropped in the tin box fastened to his collar.

When Tim died of old age in 1902, his body was mounted and placed in a glass case in the station, where he still continues his work, collecting coins through a slot in his stand.

Whales' Teeth, Elephants' Tails, Stones for Money

Shopping in the Fijis, natives slap down a whale's tooth as they order a couple of coconuts from the village grocer. Curiously, whale's teeth are the official medium of exchange among inhabitants of these romantic islands in the South Pacific.

A bit on the ponderous side, to be sure, but Fiji money isn't nearly so weighty as the huge chunks of stone used by members of the Baluba tribe in the Belgian Congo of Africa. The X-shaped slab is very rare, employed by the African natives solely in bartering for wives. Among natives of West Africa the elephant tail is another highly respected form of currency. This queer kind of exchange was used as far back as 1600, when Portuguese traders did a thriving business in buying and selling

"Is the Universe, Including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force" is the will be read in all Churches of subject of the Lesson-Sermon that Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June

The Golden Text is: "The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein" (Psalms 24:1).

The citations from the Bible in-The citations from the Bible include the following passages:
"By the word of the Lord were the heavens made; and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth. Let all the earth fear the Lord; let all the inhabitants of the world stand in awe of him; for he spake, and it was done: he commanded and it was done; he commanded, and it stood fast" (Psalms 33: 6,

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following selections from the Christian Science textbook, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Spiritual evolution alone is worthy of the exercise of divine power. Infinite Mind creates and governs all, from the mental molecule to infinity. Creation is ever appearing, and must ever continue to appear from the nature of its inexhaustible source" (pages 135: 9-10 and 507: 24-25, 28-29).

Killed by Jap Bomb

LAKEVIEW, ORE.—Soundphoto
—Mrs. Elyse Mitchell, above, and five children were killed by a high explosive bomb which was part of explosive bomb which was part of the equipment of a fallen Jap bal-loon in southern Oregon woods during an outing. The tragedy, cause of which first was kept a strict military secret, was dis-closed as a warning to the public not to approach strange objects in the forests. The woman's husband, Archie, a clergyman, was the only survivor. They were escorting a group of children on an outing when one of the youngsters spotted the balloon and an explosion occurred when he tugged at it.
